Mickey Maguire

Mickey Maguire lived on his own
With the moon and stars for neighbours,

Grew garlic on the window sill
To keep his madness out, walked to town with his head down
To buy a loaf of bread.

Some say he ate clay, drank rusty water once
And had to be taken away in an ambulance.
Mickey made darkness his secret,
Imagined he committed some unpardonable sin,

Walked the dark roads and laneways,
Stared beyond the field gates and gaps,
Talked to the hoarse wind in the trees
And asked for forgiveness.
